CLASS COMMITTEE.

*JOSEPH LYMAN. RUFUS WILLIAM NASON.
JAMES MONROE OLMSTEAD.

CLASS SECRETARY.

ARTHUR LOVELL WARE.

ASSISTANT CLASS SECRETARY.

JAMES AUGUSTUS BEATLEY.

The Sixth Triennial Report is herewith submitted to the Class.

To those who promptly responded to my recent circular — and they were a majority of the Class — I wish to express my thanks. It is a matter of gratification that many have given the history of their past three years at greater length than ever before, thereby increasing the value and interest of the Report.

I would ask those who habitually disregard my circulars to at least acknowledge their receipt, even if they decline to furnish me with information desired.

But one death has occurred in the Class during the past three years: — Austin Agnew Martin, died at Boston Highlands, April 1, 1890.

As a result of the financial clause in my recent notice to the Class, payments of $316.25 and $26.00 have been made to the Class and College Funds respectively.

ARTHUR L. WARE,
Class Secretary.

CLASS MEETINGS.

June 26, 1888.

The Fifth Triennial Dinner of the Class was held to-day at the Hotel Brunswick, Boston. Simmons presided and conducted the after-dinner exercises in a manner fully appreciated by the fifty-two members of the Class who were present. A poem was read by Grant which was subsequently ordered printed and sent to each member of the Class. Remarks were make by Lord, Jackson, Paul, G. H. Johnson, M. H. Richardson, Washburn, Beatley and White. Songs were sung by Daland and Ware, also by Peters, '74, who was present for a few moments. A feature of the evening was the sending of a congratulatory bottle of wine to the Class of 1838 which was celebrating in an adjoining room the fiftieth anniversary of their graduation.

ARTHUR L. WARE,
Secretary.

June 27, 1888.

The Class met to-day as usual at Holworthy 6. As there was no business to be transacted the meeting was of a purely social nature with the customary convivial tendency.

ARTHUR L. WARE,
Secretary.

June 26, 1889.

Holworthy 6 was again open to the Class to-day. The meeting was of the customary social nature and no business was transacted.

ARTHUR L. WARE,
Secretary.

April 8, 1890.

A meeting of the Class was to-day held at Parker's to take action upon the death of Austin Agnew Martin, which occurred at Boston Highlands, April 1, 1890, from diabetes. Remarks were made by Olmstead and Williams, and the following resolutions passed: —

[The resolutions will be found elsewhere in this Report.]

ARTHUR L. WARE,
Secretary.

June 25, 1890.

The Class met to-day at Holworthy 6. As no business came before the meeting the time was devoted to the social observances peculiar to the occasion.

ARTHUR L. WARE,
Secretary.

CLASS OF 1873.

*CALVIN EDWARD ABBOTT.

Died at Cambridge, Sept. 2, 1873.

CHARLES DAY ADAMS.

Since the last Report he has been elected City Solicitor of Woburn, Mass.

LOWELL DOUGLASS ALLEN.

"In 1879 I accepted a position in the printing department of the Manchester Mills. Having filled the same three years I was sent abroad in the interests of that corporation, visiting the principal print centres of France and Germany. My headquarters in Paris, I was busied in making selections of novelties in the way of designs to be reproduced at Manchester for the home market. During the years following my return I gave my attention to some marble interests in Vermont until I again accepted a position in the printing department of the same mills where I still am."

ELGIN ADELBERT ANGELL.

Continues to practice Law at Cleveland, Ohio.

FREDERICK FANNING AYER.

Secretary has not heard from him.

LEMUEL HOLLINGSWORTH BABCOCK.

Practising Law in New York.

THOMAS WILLIAM BALDWIN.

Continues the practice of his profession as Civil Engineer and Surveyor in Bangor, Me.

WILLIAM TORREY BARKER.

"My business is the same — Paper Manufacturer. Office and address same — 220 Devonshire Street, Boston. May 1, 1889, I changed my residence from Dorchester to Glen Road, Jamaica Plain. A trip to England and the Continent for two months, May – June, 1890, broke the monotony of my business life and gave me my first real rest for sixteen years."

CHARLES EDWIN BATCHELDER.

"We are so seldom urged to be diffuse in narrating our personal experience that your circular comes like a draught of sweet water to a thirsty and heated traveller and egotism swells with conscious pride as we endeavor to spread out the scanty material available for that purpose, as if we had really done something worth noting in our eighteen years' pilgrimage. It is not for any historical value therein contained, but for the gratification of that unworthy spirit of curiosity in my classmates, which we all possess in a greater degree than is pleasant, that I append the following tabular view of numerous unconsidered trifles possessed by me since graduation:

Justice of the Police Court of Portsmouth, N. H., from Sept. 6, 1876 to date, during which time I have reviewed nearly five thousand criminals on their way to Jail, House of Correction, State's Prison and the gallows.

Justice of the Peace for the County and State for the same term.

Notary Public for the State, June 30, 1879 to date.
Member of the Suffolk County, Mass., Bar, from June 1876.
Member of Bar of U. S. Circuit Court of N. H., since Oct. 1879.
Secretary N. H. S. P. C. A., 1878–1881.
Director of N. H. S. P. C. A., 1881 to date.
Director N. H. S. P. C. C., 1884 to date.
Counsel N. H. S. P. C. C., 1884 to date.
Moderator, Ward 2, Portsmouth, 1882–1886.
Member Portsmouth School Committee, 1882 to date.
Director Howard Benevolent Society, 1883 to date.
Trustee Langdon Park, Portsmouth, N. H., 1888 to date.
Trustee Portsmouth Savings Bank, 1888 to date.
President Republican City Club, 1888.
Member Republican State Committee, 1888–1890.
Commissioner U. S. Court of Claims, 1889 to date.
Nominated as Republican Candidate for N. H. House of Representatives, Nov. 1889. Declined the honor.

Have continued to reside in Portsmouth, N. H., in the practice of the Law. In 1888 and 1889 I took vacation trips to Europe."

JAMES AUGUSTUS BEATLEY.

"Since the last report was issued I have emigrated from the land beyond the sea (Chelsea), and have become a naturalized citizen and qualified voter of the City of Boston. I still continue to teach modern languages in the English High School, and though during the past winter I received quite a tempting offer to take up my abode in Philadelphia, I concluded that Boston was good enough for me. The school Orchestra organized four years ago has improved in numbers and quality, and is a recognized feature of all public declamations. My health is all that could be desired, and while I have been able to tip the scales at one hundred ninety, plus, I hope there will not be 'too much of me in the coming bye and bye.'"

WILLIAM APPLETON BELL.

"I am still practising Medicine in Somerville, Mass., where I have been since 1879. I am sorry that I cannot add more as you request, but 'No change since last Report' exactly fits my case. More would be romancing."

EDWARD DETRAZ BETTENS.

Continues the practice of Law in New York.

FRANCIS HAGAR BIGELOW.

"In June, 1889, I resigned my professorship of Mathematics and Astronomy at Racine College, Racine, Wisconsin, in consequence of certain financial embarrassments that overtook the Trustees of the institution, causing a temporary suspension of the work of the Faculty. Having passed through the usual formalities I assumed the position of Assistant in the Nautical Almanac office, Washington, which place I still occupy. From Sept., 1889 to June, 1890 I was on the U. S. Eclipse Expedition to West Africa as Astronomer, and spent a pleasant eight months visiting Africa as far south as the Cape of Good Hope, and also the Islands of the Atlantic. My scientific studies continue in the field of Solar and Terrestial Physics, and I have made some progress on the problems of the Corona, the Aurora, and Terrestial Magnetism. Also in taking star transits by photography and the elimination of personal equation from direct observations I have rendered some interesting contributions. Have been elected into several scientific and literary societies."

EDWARD PENNIMAN BLISS.

"Within three years very little has happened in my career to make mention of in print. My wife and I have a pleasant home in Lexington; we have no children. The winter of 1890 we spent in Southern Europe and in Corsica for my wife's health. My chief interest is my business in Boston, to which I keep very close. In politics I have become a Democrat and am chairman of the Lexington Democratic Town Committee. I have never held any political office, but have been much interested in seven years' service on the School Committee of which I am now Chairman."

* JOHN COFFIN JONES BROWN, Jr.

Died in Boston, October, 1876.

JOHN BRYANT.

"Have done very little for last six years except search for health, sailing, shooting and travelling."

COLLINSON PIERREPONT EDWARDS BURGWYN.

"I have an indistinct recollection of seeing a printed circular (all of which I promptly put in the waste basket without reading), with your name on it, inquiring about what I have been doing for the past three years. It is to be observed that in this case your name alone rescued the circular from an untimely oblivion. For the most part I have continued to shovel sand against the tide in the effort to bring ships of 25 feet draft of water to Richmond, i. e., the U. S. Works on the Improvement of the James River. In between times I solaced myself by inflicting upon my friends a love story, which I recommend to all newly fledged graduates. I also erected the monument to General Lee, after the designs of the artist Mercie, going to Paris for the purpose. While abroad I travelled in France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Germany and England. Am Consulting Engineer for two or three works of internal improvement near Richmond, and President of a construction company and Vice-President of a transportation company. I have also endeavored to instil into the youthful mind knowledge of a rudimentary kind, and am Principal of the Night School of Technology connected with the Virginia Mechanics' Institute. Otherwise I am a tax-payer, and, I hope, a good citizen."

HARRY BURNETT.

Continues in business in Boston.

CHARLES PEARSON BUTTON.

"No change since last Report, of interest or worthy of note, would amply answer your request, but as you draw the line at the stereotyped reply will be a trifle more specific. My address, my blissful state of bachelordom and my credit, in fact, almost everything but my avoirdupois remains the same. Living in Wisconsin I am not of the F. F. V's., but of the F. F. F's., fair, fat and forty. I am still continuing a fairly successful search for the mighty dollar in the manufacture of mittens, for those who will buy them."

WILLIAM FRANKLIN CHENEY.

"I am still, as I have been for the last fifteen years, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, in Dedham, and living the quiet, but I hope not entirely useless, life of a country parson."

ALFRED GAYLORD CHURCH.

Continues the practice of Law at Meadville, Pa.

HARRY SPENCER CRAM.

Secretary has heard nothing from him since graduation.

JAMES GREENLEAF CROSWELL.

"I am well, married, live in New York under the supervision of E. D. Bettens, and should be glad to see more of my classmates."

TUCKER DALAND.

"I am somewhat poorer than at last Report, somewhat older, but don't much care."

ROBERT ALEXANDER BARNARD DAYTON.

"I should be very glad to report to you that I had accomplished something of consequence, or that some great good fortune had happened to me since the last Report, but I cannot manufacture history and I am able to report only that I have continued to practice Law and that nothing outside the ordinary run of a lawyer's practice has occurred to me. I am not married and I have no children."

*ROBERT DICKEY.

Died in New York, October, 1879.

EDWARD SHERMAN DODGE.

Practising Law in Boston.

JOSHUA CLEAVES DODGE.

Nothing heard from him. Believed to be living in Europe.

WILLIAM BRADFORD HOMER DOWSE.

"Your circular of May 12th, asks for an answer and I am glad to send you my word. As we are all so modest I suggest that you have blanks, like to Census Bureau, to draw us out. I shall be present at our next dinner, and, as since I last wrote you I have sold my cottages and purchased eight and one-half acres of land, I shall come with the appetite of a farmer and lawyer combined and expect to be served accordingly. I hope as you grow older that you are more than ever convinced that it is not by 'bread alone' that we live and have our being, and that you will have this in mind in 'Mr. Parker's contract.'"

WILLIAM LAWRENCE EATON.

"I regret my inability to send you any items of supreme interest for the forthcoming 'Triennial.' Since the last Report there 'has been no change' except such as serve to warn one of receding youth. My allegiance to the College Seal forbids my inventing a record, even to enhance the interest of our worthy Secretary's Report."

JOHN ALBERT ESTABROOKS.

"The death of my partner, Edwin Sibley, in June, 1888, decided my retirement from the teaming business in Boston. Having worked for twelve years at continuously high pressure, and longing for rest, I deliberately gave up a good income in a well-established business to make the experiment of a life of leisure. I have not since then seen the day when I would be willing to re-enter upon the old conditions of office confinement. I have spent one year in England with my sister, and two winters with friends among the remote mountains of western North Carolina. I had intended to buy land in North Carolina and work on it in the way of development during winters, for the climate is of the most brilliant description. But I could not decide to do so, chiefly on account of the general low standard of living, whether it be in food or manners. I thoroughly enjoy these days of unlimited out-of-door exercise in cricket, tennis and riding. I have held some smaller offices such as U. S. Marshal and clerk at elections, vestryman in churches, treasurer of clubs, trustee of property and captain of athletic teams."

OLIVER HURD EVERETT.

Is still practising medicine at Worcester, Mass., and holds the office of Surgeon to the Worcester City Hospital and to the Memorial Hospital.

FREDERICK GETMAN FINCKE.

Nothing heard from him.

LYMAN BEECHER FISKE.

"I still remain Auditor of the Harvard Dining Association, office in Memorial Hall, and I have not yet 'given hostages to fortune.'"

WILLIAM JOHN GORDON FOGG.

Nothing heard from him.

FREDERICK PRENTISS FORSTER.

"My firm of Weekes & Forster was dissolved on May 1, 1889, and from that time I have continued in Law business under the firm name of Forster & Speir, being associated with Francis Speir, Jr., and my nephew, Henry A. Forster."

ALFRED DWIGHT FOSTER.

Practising Law in Boston.

FRANK HUGH FOSTER.

Continues to hold the Professorship of Church History at Oberlin Theological Seminary, Oberlin, O.

SAMUEL WILLIAM FRENCH.

"During the last three years I have been finishing the organizations started before the last Report, and I can now see them all self-supporting. These are the Emergency Hospital, the Directory for Nurses, the Woman's Hospital and a Training School for Nurses. Last December the Harvard Club of Milwaukee was organized, your humble classmate being chosen President. We number about forty and intend to do good work. President Eliot's visit to Milwaukee did much for Harvard's interest. So far in my life's journey I have been domestically, physically, professionally and financially successful and I hope I may continue so unto the end. During my recent visit East I met a number of college men and I was surprised to see how gray they had grown. I have lost some hair from the top, that is expected with every married man, but I was told by honest John Simmons and Fred Forster that I looked as rosy as ever. With this you have my history and photograph as well."

JOSEPH EVERETT GARLAND.

"Your bombardment of circulars duly received; damage trifling, except for the pathos of the 'positively last' which wrings from me the admission that I am still practising Medicine at Gloucester, Mass., and have no reason to complain of not having enough to do."

FRANCIS EDWARD GAVIN.

Practising Law at Greensburg, Ind.

CHARLES NEWTON GOODRICH.

"I live in three worlds: the Business, Sunday-School and Christian Endeavor; pay taxes in each and am at home in all. My real estate office is in Boston, at No. 75 State street, where I promise to 'fleece' the public in general and my classmates in particular, as readily as any man in Boston. If you don't believe it, give me a trial. My home is at Medford, where I live in a state of single blessedness without expectations."

JOHN CHEEVER GOODWIN.

"The principal change since I last diagnosed my condition is an increased baldness, and further contributions to the 'gaiety of nations' in the shape of 'The Merry Monarch,' 'Wang,' and other comic operas too humorous to mention. Two more little girls have been born to me, one living only a few months, making four daughters, upon whose husbands (when captured) I expect to rely for support in my old age. I have combined the duties of Private Secretary to the Comptroller of the City of New York with considerable dramatic work until this Spring, when my attention was called to the fact that a candle burning at both ends is consumed with an unpleasant rapidity. In consequence I have enjoyed an enforced idleness for several months, agreeably varied by absorbing pills and potions ad nauseam. I wear no larger sized hat than when at Cambridge, as I wish more of '73 would test by looking me up."

ROBERT GRANT.

Practising Law in Boston, and engaged in literary pursuits. Is also chairman of the Boston Water Board.

WILLIAM MANSFIELD GROTON.

"I am still Rector of Christ Church, Westerly, R. I. I have performed during the past year some duties beyond the limits of my parish."

ELISHA GUNN, Jr.

"I can only write in reply to your letter that I have continued to live in Springfield the past three years. Circumstances materially unchanged."

HENRY HARRISON HAYNES.

Was married July 2, 1889, to Mary Frances Cushing of Cambridge. At present he has no regular occupation.

OCTAVIUS THORNDIKE HOWE.

"I do not know how we can give you news when there is none. You have the date of birth of my two boys and there have been no new arrivals. I still practice Medicine in Lawrence and find enough to do. Beyond the loss of my favorite bull terrier, that died this morning, I have nothing to add."

WALTER CLINTON HILL.

Nothing heard from him.

FRANK ALLEN HUBBARD.

"I am thankful to say that I am in good health and otherwise prosperous. Since the last Report my life has been the life of a general practitioner of Medicine and Surgery in a country city. My profession is a satisfying one to me, still there is not much to be said of interest to others. I have written some papers, lectured a little and taken part in the deliberations of the School Board, of which I have been for five years Secretary. In April was chosen President of the Bristol North District Massachusetts Medical Society."

HENRY GUERNSEY HUBBARD.

Nothing heard from him.

EDMUND CUNNINGHAM INGALLS.

"I was installed Pastor of the Evangelical Congregational Church, at Brookfield, Mass., in November, 1888, having come from the church at Saco, Me., which fact I think I gave you last year. I have wife, no children, and am happily placed and appear to be at the work that belongs to me."

JAMES FREDERIC JACKSON.

"I was elected City Solicitor of Fall River in 1880 and held that office until elected Mayor of that city in December, 1888. I was re-elected Mayor in December, 1889. Was elected Lieut.-Col. 1st Reg't Inf'y M. V. M., in December, 1888, and resigned that position in January last. Am now practising Law in this city." (Fall River, Mass.)

GEORGE HENRY JOHNSON.

"I concluded that ten years and four months was long enough for a Harvard light to be kept shining in the very face of the centre of Amherst's scintillations and I closed my very pleasant first pastorate, at North Amherst, Mass., on Dec. 31, 1888, and went to Georgetown, in Essex Co., where I was installed as Pastor of the Peabody Memorial Church, Jan. 2, 1889. The church building was erected by George Peabody, of London, as a monument to his mother's memory and the parsonage was his sister's residence. Since being here our family has been increased by the birth of a daughter, Helen, born June 16, 1890. As for publications, some country papers occasionally get out of 'copy' and use one of my sermons for 'padding,' and I have prepared for publication 'A Popular Catalogue of the Peabody Public Library,' of this town, of whose board of Trustees I have been Secretary for a couple of years. Just before leaving Amherst I put through the press a Historical Manual of the church of which I was pastor; and in a moment of unguarded generosity the literary editor of a Philadelphia paper showed me how to write a poem, for which he paid me five dollars. But when I tried to 'go it alone' and forwarded another, he respectfully declined to have anything more to do with me."

JOHN WARREN JOHNSON.

Continues to practice Law at Woburn, Mass.

FREDERIC PRINCE JONES.

Engaged in Real Estate business at Duluth, Minn.

FREDERIC KEBLER.

Nothing heard from him since graduation.

CLARENCE ERSKINE KELLEY.

"I am still teaching in Haverhill, Mass., where I have been Principal of the High School since 1881, having previously held the position of Sub-Master in the same school for five years. My life is a very full and busy, if uneventful one. If you will see that I am made President of the next great Leland Stanford University that is created, I shall be happy to put that in my next report."

HENRY SHERMAN KILBY.

Practising Medicine at North Attleboro, Mass.

WILLIS ALBERT KINGSBURY.

"I am still Judge of the District Court here (South Framingham), and practising Law to help out a small salary, confining my attention mostly to matters in the Probate Court and to such office business as I am fortunate enough to pick up."

JAMES LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN.

"I am Professor of Political Economy and Finance at Cornell University and see Jack White every day. These are my two distinctions since last writing."

WILLIAM CRANSTON LAWTON.

"I continued two years with my friend Roswell Parish, teaching Greek and Latin in his school at 11 Newbury Street, Boston, 1887–1889, and expected to continue longer, but early in the Summer of 1889 the Archæological Institute undertook to raise $80,000 by popular subscription to buy and excavate Delphi. The President, Prof. C. E. Norton, asked me to accept for the summer the Secretaryship of the Committee in charge. The correspondence and other duties grew rapidly, and soon I was requested to accept a modest salary for the academic year, 1889–90, and devote that time wholly to the Institute's service. This proffer was accepted, because the opportunity seemed to be such a one as could never again recur to lift our classical scolarship out of all the old ruts and arouse a wide-spread interest in the history, literature, art and life of the Greeks. This is not the place to tell the story of that undertaking. It suffices to say that after discouraging delays and repeated postponements the whole sum was raised, — the last $20,000 with astonishing rapidity in the very teeth of the financial panic last Fall, — and then, after all, the concession was secured by the French, probably because, through their commercial relations with Greece, they could use political pressure in Athens which we could not resist. It was none the less a great triumph, for such a sum was probably never raised elsewhere for a purely scholarly undertaking where there was no hope whatever of any material or visible return. In case of success, every stone, tile and coin exhumed must have remained in Greece; casts, photographs, prior right of publication and the glory would have been our only recompense. In October, 1889, I spent several weeks in the West, and lectured in Detroit, Chicago, Madison, Minneapolis and elsewhere. Four new societies of the Institute, with over two hundred members, were immediately organized in the four cities mentioned.

At their May meeting (1890), the council of the Institute created for me the office of permanent salaried secretary, with the express understanding that I would give to their work only the 'leisure hours' of a school or college teacher. President Warren, of Boston University, had already invited me to fill his Greek chair for the year 1890–91, during the professor's sabbatical vacation. This is the grade of work I have desired ever since my studies abroad in 1880–83, but no opportunity had before opened for me to step at once from my old profession of school-teaching into a satisfactory salary as college professor. For the coming year (i.e. September, 1891 – June, 1892), numerous desirable opportunities were opened to me, and I have finally agreed to accept the professorship of Latin at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me. Your two challenges have found me in the whirl of the Annuals at B. U. I am also acting just now, reluctantly, as Secretary and Treasurer of the Boston Society of the Institute and calling in the annual dues. I am trying to write a history of the Delphi project for the forthcoming annual report. My house is for sale and we hope to flit before the end of June. Our cook, with true Keltic ingratitude to the Sassenach, fled at the first mention of our retreat. My literary activity has continued to be limited almost wholly to the Atlantic. Besides various signed papers (one of which, on Delphi, was as nearly a campaign document as I could get accepted), I have recently printed there four reviews of classical books: (Abbott's History of Greece, Miss Harrison's Myths and Monuments of Athens, T. S. Perry's Greek Literature, and Gildersleeve's Essays). In these papers I have argued more and more strenuously for the needed reform in Greek and Latin studies, for more attention to literature and art, less to grammar and philology as final ends. There are some signs already of a turn in the tide. In discussing Mr. Perry's book I tried not to be influenced by any painful memories of college days."

ISAAC NEWTON LEWIS.

"I have but little to add in relation to my life during the past three years. I have been moderately succesful and fairly contented. I still hold whatever offices I last reported. I still sometimes indulge in literary work, but have published nothing in book form since 1888, except 'Pleasant Hours in Sunny Lands in a Tour Around the World,' now published by DeWolfe, Fiske & Co., Boston, parts of which are now in use in Pennsylvania and other States as a geographical reader for the public schools."

CHARLES KING LEXOW.

"There has been no change in my condition since making my last statement that I can think of. Not having the Report before me I cannot remember whether I stated that I ran for Justice of the City Court of New York on the Republican ticket in 1887, received over 70,000 votes but was beaten. Since then I have had plenty of time to muse over the uncertainty of politics."

JAMES OTIS LINCOLN.

Left St. Luke's, Troy, N. Y., after four years, to take Holy Trinity, Whitehall, N. Y. There he remained a few months and then moved to Kansas City. In August next he will go to Topeka, Kas., as Chaplain and Professor of Latin in the College of the Sisters of Bethany.

GEORGE HINCKLEY LYMAN, Jr.

Practising Law in Boston.

JOSEPH LYMAN.

Died at Northampton, Mass., September 6, 1883.

AUSTIN AGNEW MARTIN.

Died at Boston Highlands, April 1, 1890.

Austin Agnew Martin was born in Roxbury, Mass., Nov. 3, 1851. Was third son of Dr. Henry Austin Martin of Roxbury, and Frances Coffin (Crosby) Martin of Lowell, Mass. He entered the Roxbury Latin School in 1860 and Harvard College in 1869, graduating in 1873. He at once commenced the study of Law in the office of his maternal grandfather, the late Judge Crosby of Lowell, attended the regular course of lectures and instruction at the Boston Law School and was admitted to the Bar of Suffolk County in 1876. On his father's side he was descended from a long line of aristocratic ancestors distinguished in the army and navy of Great Britain, one of whom, General James Agnew, was killed in command of the British army at the battle of Germantown in the American Revolution. On his mother's side he represented the fifth generation in succession at the Bar. His grandfather, Nathan Crosby, Dart. A.B., LL.D, was for forty years Judge of the Police Court at Lowell, and his great grandfather, Stephen Moody, was graduated at Harvard in the class of 1790, and admitted to the Bar of Suffolk County in 1793. His great, great-grandfather was Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in New Hampshire, and his grand-uncles, Dixie Crosby, Professor of Surgery at Dartmouth College for thirty years, and Alpheus Crosby, Professor of Greek, at Dartmouth, were men of wide reputation. He served two terms of enlistment in the First Corps of Cadets and was successively corporal, sergeant and lieutenant of his company. At an early age he developed a rare literary taste, and his keen appreciation of what is best in literature and his thorough acquaintance with the works of the most eminent Latin, French, German and English authors, added to his own unusual wit and brilliancy, made him a delightful companion and conversationalist as well as writer. He was an enthusiastic lover of nature and found his greatest pleasure in long rambles in the country, in shooting, fishing, riding and boating, and was a prominent member of the Union, Athletic, and Country Clubs of Boston, and the Fish and Game Association. In 1874 he made a pleasure trip of five months in Europe, and another shorter one in 1881, and passed the winter of 1884–85 in San Francisco and other places of interest in California. He died in Roxbury, of diabetes, April 1, 1890, after an absence of only one day from his office and professional work.

At a meeting of the Class of 1873 at the Parker House, Boston, on the 8th day of April, 1890, the following resolutions commemorative of our classmate, Austin Agnew Martin, were passed: —

Resolved: That sudden death has deprived us of the presence and society of one greatly endeared to us which is a loss keenly felt by all.

Resolved: But though absent we shall ever recall his many noble qualities: his manly presence, the fertility of a mind ever responsive to the demands of dignified effort, a choice sense of humor which made his companionship so attractive and which was revealed so delightfully in literary work, the cleverness of which he was always prone to underrate, the love he displayed for his chosen profession, and his ability therein, the cheerful fortitude with which, conscious that the end must be death, he bore the gradual loss of health — all these traits of a generous nature we shall ever cherish for their example and worth.

Resolved: That to his mother and brothers we desire to offer this genuine expression of sorrow and to assure them that their bereavement is tenderly shared by all of us.

The sudden death of our classmate, Austin Agnew Martin, in the Spring of 1890, coming as it did without any note of warning, was a loss keenly felt by all. To see a dear friend, with a rich nature full of promise, drop in the prime of manhood, is a sight well calculated to fill one with a mingled sense of life's uncertainty and incompleteness. In school-boy days the writer had learned to cherish the rare and superior qualities of our classmate. The intimacy begun during the hours of study and recreation at the Roxbury Latin School was later strengthened and deepened by the yet closer relationship of chums at Harvard. By this daily contact it was easy to discover the traits of character and virtues which enriched the nature of our friend. His mind, ever active in the search for knowledge, was a source of information to those brought in contact with him; his conversation was always brilliant and sparkled with a richness of wit and anecdote seldom met with. Association with him was always a pleasure. Impulsive in his nature, he never lost the sense of true manliness or generosity. To such rare mental qualities was added a fondness for all that goes to round out the physical side of life. He delighted in the relief and benefit which rod and gun can afford; and his appreciation of nature kept pace with his fondness for literary and professional pursuits. Perhaps no more feeling tribute could be paid our classmate than the following notice written at the time of his death by a dear friend: —

"Austin Agnew Martin, who died, untimely, on Monday last, was a member of the Suffolk Bar, and a graduate of Harvard University of the class of 1873. For the last six years he has been suffering from a dangerous internal disease, of which he gave no sign and made no mention outside of his own household. Like a hero he took his place in the battle of life, well knowing that at any time he might fall, but with unfaltering courage, and without a murmur of complaint he did his duty until a sudden and severe cold hastened his ailment to its fatal ending. Mr. Martin was an exceptionally brilliant man, with a rare knowledge and appreciation of what is best in literature. His facile pen portrayed his ready wit and keen intelligence, and his clever paraphrases in verse of some of the reported legal decisions are unsurpassed, if not unequalled, in their way. Those who knew him best found out his worth. Generous, impulsive and warm-hearted, he had a fine contempt for whatever was mean or unmanly. Loyal to every friend, unassuming and genial, he never sought notoriety. He had a delicate sense of honor that was worthy a Bayard or a Sidney. At the age of thirty-eight, young, courageous and hopeful, his life here is ended. Well may his friends say of him, in the classic language of which he was so fond, 'Quis desiderio sit pudor aut modus tam cari capitis?'"

SILAS MARCUS MACVANE.

"The three years that have passed since your last Report have brought me little or nothing worth recording. I am still a Professor of History in Harvard and the college has flourished immensely since I have been engaged here. The inference is obvious, but modesty forbids my dwelling on it. I begin now to be on the watch for '73 boys in the Freshman Class. They will come, of course, specially consigned to my care. I have any amount of good advice ready on tap for them. Who speaks first? The Class Baby is just completing her Freshman year in the Harvard Annex. If the boys of the Class are not to be distanced, some of them must show up pretty soon. Don't have them wait for the three years' course."

* WINTHROP MILLER.

Died at Minneapolis, October 16, 1884.

CHARLES STURTEVANT MOORE.

"My career since graduation may be briefly told. I have taught ever since that important event, the first four years being spent as Assistant in Mr. Hopkinson's Private School in Boston. The next eight years I was Principal of the Taunton (Mass.) High School, and in 1885 I resigned that position to become Head Master of the Cathedral School of St. Paul, Garden City, L. I."

CLARENCE BLOOMFIELD MOORE.

"I am not married and my life since the last Triennial has been so uneventful that, like the child's Robinson Crusoe, it could be written in words of one syllable. I spent last winter in Florida and did some interesting work opening Indian mounds, the results of which are at the Peabody Museum of Archæology."

SAMUEL LORD MORISON.

Since 1889 has been President of the Morison-Allen Co., 145 Broadway, New York, a company engaged in the purification of water for city and manufacturers' supply.

JOHN MURDOCH.

"I wish it was in my power to 'respond at length' to your circular, which I have just received. The fact is, however, that I have done very little to chronicle since the last Report. I have settled down into a place where there is very little change from year to year, or even from day to day. I am still busy with my work as Librarian of this institution [Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C.], and am kept pretty steadily at my desk, hardly ever stirring out of Washington till I get my month's leave in the summer and can come up to Massachusetts and go fishing. During the last three years I have managed to find time to write a number of short papers on my favorite subject of Eskimo Ethnology, which have appeared in various scientific periodicals, chiefly in the American Anthropologist. My big report on the ethnological results of our expedition is not yet printed, but there is a fair prospect at last of its appearing in the course of the year."

RUFUS WILLIAM NASON.

Practising Law in Boston.

EDWARD BEVERLY NELSON.

"I am still Principal of the Central New York Institution for Deaf Mutes and have been for the past fifteen or sixteen years. For two years after graduation I studied Law at the Columbia Law School, New York City, and as I was about to graduate from that institution, I received an appointment (unexpectedly) as a Professor in the New York Institution for the instruction of Deaf and Dumb, situated in New York City. This I accepted, thinking I could acquire much easier and with greater facility the wherewithal to sustain life than by the practise of Law, although I regretted exceedingly my inability to graduate from the Law School. Still, my two years' experience in the Law School has been of great assistance to me. In the Fall of 1876 I received the appointment of Principal of the Central New York Institution for Deaf Mutes. How I came to receive it I know not, as I was not an applicant, but the reputation I had in New York State of being fully conversant with the ways and characteristics of this unfortunate class, through having a deaf brother and sister, I presume had something to do with it. In June, 1877, I married Jessie Ruggles Weld, of Medina, N. Y. In September of 1878 a daughter was born to me by the name of Edwina Weld Nelson; I lost this little daughter in March, 1879. On the 21st of November, 1887, another daughter was born to me by the name of Edwine Rebecca Weld Nelson. This little one still survives and is a great pet with all. My position brings me more or less in connection with the legislature and the State officers and consequently with the principal politicians of both parties, some of whom I am very well acquainted with, from the Governor down."

JAMES MONROE OLMSTEAD.

"The largest portion of my time since the last Report has been devoted to politics and public life. During the year 1889 and 1890 I had the honor to conduct two campaigns as President of the Republican City Committee of Boston. In the first year we experimented with the Australian ballot system, and the result was so successful in Boston that Governor Brackett was saved from defeat owing to the small vote his democratic opponent got in this city; while Mayor Hart was re-elected by an overwhelming majority. Though not so successful at the polls last year, the party I represented is to be congratulated in having seen the adoption in its caucus-system of the great reform instituted by the application of the Australian system of secret voting in the primaries, and in thus divesting them of the objectional features of ring rule. Elected last Fall to the House of Representatives I have tried as best I could to represent the interests of the State and Ward Eleven in that body."

HERBERT INGERSOLL ORDWAY.

"My business is the same as before; I have not removed my home from Newton Centre and I am still a mugwump. There has absolutely nothing happened in the history of my life during the past three years that could be of interest to anybody."

LOUIS SHREVE OSBORNE.

"I resigned my rectorship of Trinity Church, Chicago, Easter, 1889, this resignation taking effect July 1st in that year. Early in this month, with my family, I sailed for Scotland where we settled down in a little village five miles from 'Edinboro' toon,' intending to spend a year at least in the 'land o' cakes.' After we had been there six months I received a most unexpected call to Trinity Church, Newark, the old mother church of New Jersey."

CHARLES HARRISON OTIS.

"One does not like to preach upon himself as a text, but in view of your urgent request, twice made, I will state briefly what has occurred during the last five years. I am still practising Law in Brooklyn with fair success. My practice is chiefly office, corporation and probate practice. I try no cases. I am still Counsel for the Public Administrator in our County, and am one of the New York State Commissioners of Charities, and treasurer, chief proprietor and stock owner of a steam snow-plow company, known as the 'Jull Manufacturing Company.'"

FRANK PAUL.

"I am still practising Law; still unmarried and without any idea of ever taking such a step; stouter than I was when I last wrote and am quite as bald as then, perhaps more so. I really do not know how to avoid saying 'No change since last Report,' except to state that in October, 1889, I dissolved my law partnership with Hon. Halsey J. Boardman, and that I am now located at 50 State Street, Boston, where I continue to practise Law whenever I get a chance to do so."

HENRY ROCKEY PENDERY.

Continues to act at Register of U. S. Land Office, at Leadville, Colo. Is also engaged in the practise of Law and in mining.

GILBERT ABIEL ABBOTT PEVEY.

"Your last Report was wrong as far I am concerned. You reported that I had three children, I have had but two. January, 1890, I was appointed Assistant District Attorney for Middlesex County, which office I still hold. Besides attending to my official duties as above, I am actively engaged in the practise of my profession otherwise."

DUDLEY LEAVITT PICKMAN.

"In spite of your praiseworthy efforts to make the record of the lives of our Class eventful, I am unable to depart from the time-honored phrase which you so seriously object to without drawing upon my imagination in a way that would be too easily detected. Were my residence Alaska or Nicaragua I would send you something interesting and risk it."

CHARLES ALFRED PITKIN.

"I have completed fourteen years as Master of Mathematics and Physics in Thayer Academy, South Braintree, also seven years at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Boston, the first four years as Lecturer and Instructor in General Chemistry, the last three as Professor of the same subject. I also continue to do work as a private tutor in Boston and vicinity in winter and at Newport, R. I., in the summer. In June, 1890, I received from Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y., the degrees of A.M. and Ph.D., by examination. Members of the Class who are masons may be interested to know that I was Worshipful Master of Rural Lodge, Quincy, Mass., 1888–1890. Those who are politicians may be interested to know that I am now a democrat and not a republican as formerly. I think of nothing further to add, unless it be a description of my personal appearance at present, which I am told is that of a stout, gray-haired gentleman of middle age."

*EDWIN REED PRATT.

Died at Worcester, Mass., October 31, 1880.

JOSEPH VILA PRICHARD.

CHARLES ABBOTT PRINCE.

Practising Law in Boston. Is also president of one of the Boston professional ball clubs.

WILLIAM ARCHER PURRINGTON.

"I am very sorry that my life is so eventless as to afford no interest to others, and precious little to myself. I fear the Class Report must remain unswollen by me, although I have myself swelled visibly since its last issue. I believe I weigh over one hundred and eighty pounds. This increase of weight is my sole memorable achievement since graduating."

ELBRIDGE DWIGHT RAND.

"Am unmarried, and engaged in lumber business at Burlington, Iowa; Keokuk, Iowa; Keithsburg, Ill.; Stillwater, Minn.; Eau Claire, Wis. The world uses me well."

WALTER RAYMOND.

Continues the management of the Raymond Excursions.

*LUTHER CLARK REDFIELD.

Died in Boston, May, 1879.

AMBROSE CROSBY RICHARDSON.

"My account of myself must of necessity be very similar to that which I furnished for the last Report, as I am still engaged in the same business, that of private tutoring, and am as successful as ever in it. I have had but one new experience, that of a short trip to Europe in the summer of 1889 when I made a tour by bicycle through Scotland and England, in France from Dieppe to Paris, and thence to Boulogne by way of Beauvais and Amiens. At Boulogne my wheel broke down with a crack in the backbone extending nearly around it after carrying me faithfully for many weeks. Why it had not broken long ago I could not understand, but was very thankful that it did not. The trip proved about ten times as enjoyable as I had anticipated, and our party (there were four of us) had the very best kind of luck. It rained every time we struck a big city, and stopped as soon as it was time to take to the road again. On reaching home I wrote an account of my travels which was published in instalments in the Buffalo Courier. In that same year, or rather in the winter of 1889–90, I took a hand in the fight for Ballot Reform in this State, writing many letters about it for the Courier, and giving many lectures of instruction to voters after the law was passed. The law as enacted was a compromise measure and very far from satisfactory, yet it was a gain over our former system of voting. I became the recognized authority in this city on the Australian ballot system, and last winter hoping to influence the Legislature in amending the law, I devised a form of ballot similar to that of Massachusetts, but with an emblem or device added to the names of the candidates of each party in order to disarm the objection that 'the illiterate voter would be disfranchised by the Australian ballot." This ballot I had printed and distributed all over the State, sending a copy to nearly every member of the Legislature. A bill embodying my ideas exactly was introduced, but was not pushed owing to Gov. Hill's known determination not to permit the 'blanket' ballot to be adopted. But for this I think the bill would have become a law, as my ballot was well-nigh universally approved. I had it electrotyped and propose to try again next winter, by which time I believe the people will have become tired of the clumsiness of separate party ballots, which we now have; and the chief obstacle will be out of the way before the next Legislature meets.

"This, I believe, is all that is worth mentioning in my life for the last three years, except that I have at last succeeded in inducing the Faculty to hold the entrance examinations in Buffalo this year — a move which I think will result is great benefit both to the college and to the city. There will be about seventeen candidates, preliminary or final. The only drawback to it is that it will prevent my attending the Class Dinner, which I had intended to do. I shall have a pupil or two at the examination, and consequently must stay here with them and see that they don't lose their heads and so get wrecked. I joined the Cleveland Democracy of Erie County some two weeks ago, after having been a mugwump ever since there were such things. My Democracy, however, will not be of a violent type, and my party allegiance will sit very lightly indeed."

MAURICE HOWE RICHARDSON.

"I have been in Boston since last Report, never having left the city for more than four or five days at a time, and that generally on some professional business, which can hardly be called a vacation. I still continue as one of the visiting surgeons at the Hospital, and am now Assistant Professor of Anatomy in the Medical School. I lecture on Applied Anatomy, that is, Practical Anatomy, or Anatomy applied to the question of Surgery."

CHARLES THEODORE RUSSELL, JR.

"All that I can report of myself is, that I remain unmarried, and continue to practice Law in Boston, as a member of the firm of C. T. & T. H. Russell. For the last two years I have been chairman of the Massachusetts Civil Service Commission, and one of the examiners of applicants for admission to the Suffolk Bar."

JOHN OAKES SHAW, JR.

Practising Law in Boston.

JOSEPH MAURICE SHEAHAN.

"I have little to say further than that I am enjoying good health, and am as prosperous, pecuniarily, as most country physicians can expect to be. Am chairman of the Board of Health, member of the School Committee, and am connected with the Quincy City Hospital as member of the Medical and Surgical Staff and as chairman of the Medical Board."

FRANCIS BAXTER SHEPLEY.

Continues as Claim Agent in office of the Fitchburg Railroad.

GEORGE LANGDON SHOREY.

Practising Law at Lynn, Mass.

JOHN FRANKLIN SIMMONS.

"The only matter of importance in my 'history' since the last Class Report is my removal from Abington to Boston for business purposes. My office is as good a place as the world offers for spending a great deal of money for very poor service! so come in and send all your friends. Two years ago business took me to Europe for two months. I saw a little of Ireland, London, and Paris and am now prepared to write a book on any subject connected with Ireland, England or France."

FREEMAN SNOW.

Instructor in International Law at Harvard.

FREDERIC DABNEY STACKPOLE.

"Since the last Report I have accepted an opportunity to change my medical practice to Roxbury, where I may be found at 86 Dudley street. I am still unmarried and therefore have no startling announcement to make in answer to the third paragraph of the circular."

HENRY BALDWIN STONE.

"Since the last Report I have left the C. B. & Q. R. R. — on June 1, 1890 — to take the Presidency of the Chicago Telephone Company, and of the Central Union Telephone Company, both operating under the Bell patents."

FREDERICK WASHINGTON STORY.

"I have duly received your two interesting specimens of the printer's art, with stylographic annotations, and weakly — with the slight resistance implied by 'second notice' — resign myself to be interrogated. They say lawyers make, as a rule, bad witnesses, yet I can hardly or truthfully say 'no change since last Report,' for we are getting wiser and older all the time. I keep on trying cases of all sorts and kinds, losing, winning; winning, losing; mixed in with all sorts of detail of good and evil fortune. I enjoy tolerably good health; have had La Grippe (like any ordinary being), bore its horrors with becoming fortitude and returned to the world again none the worse, apparently, for it. Nevertheless, I do not think the Triennial Report entirely a failure; we cannot all achieve distinction, even in our own minds, once in every three years. But at least it keeps us together, in a certain sense, to know we are to be followed up ourselves and are to know what has happened to the others. Individually, while I have not attained to any national greatness nor held any high offices here, I have little to complain of."

JOSEPH SKINNER SWAIM.

"My last was written from Binghamton, N. Y. In May, 1890, I closed my pastorate of the First Baptist Church of that city, and entered upon that of the First Baptist Church of New Bedford, Mass."

MELVILLE HOWARD SWETT.

Practising Law in Boston.

THOMAS NYE SWIFT.

Returned from South America since last Report. It is understood that his health is in a precarious condition.

CHARLES FRANCIS TARBELL.

"On the 1st of January I formed a copartnership with Mr. Alfred A. Hunting, who is a mechanical and steam expert. On May 1st we removed to the John Hancock Building, 178 Devonshire Street, and took the agency of the Vacuum Steam Heating Company, the head-office of which is to be in Boston, Mr. Hunting to be general manager and myself treasurer. We have also taken agency for Buckeye Engines, Laidlaw & Dunn Pumps, and have facilities for making propositions for complete power and electric plants."

WILLIAM THOMAS.

"I have nothing to report since our last Report, except the loss of a daughter and the birth of another. I do not know of anything in my every-day life as a lawyer which would interest the other members of the class at all."

ALBERT HARRIS THOMPSON.

Continues in business in Boston.

FREDERICK BACON TOWNSEND.

Is an Architect in Chicago.

EDWARD PRESTON USHER.

"I have been and am President of the Grafton and Upton R. R. Co.; President of the Milford and Hopedale Street Railway Co., and also of the Hopedale Electric Car Co. I have given a good deal of attention to the use of storage batteries for street cars. Reside at Grafton, Mass."

THOMAS BARNES WARREN.

Practising Law in Springfield, Mass.

ALFRED FOSTER WASHBURN.

"I am still in the active work of the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and am as heretofore the minister of the Church of the Redeemer at City Point, South Boston, one of the churches of the Episcopal City Mission of Boston. Should any one care to know about this church and details of its work, I would refer to any of the late Annual Diocesan Reports of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Massachusetts. I am a Vice-President and Trustee of the Church Home for Orphan and Destitute Children in this city, one of the Executive Committee of the Church Temperance Society, and I hold a membership in several musical societies outside of church life. I still maintain my connection with Cambridge, where I as heretofore keep my legal residence. Various duties that appertain to a clergyman's life fall to my lot. If I can ever be of service to any of my classmates in this capacity I shall be most happy thus to be useful to any of our friends of '73. I am still unmarried, and for this Report at least must continue to be counted among those of 'single blessedness.' No hair-breadth escapes or blood-curdling incidents have befallen me in my career. A kind Providence has sent me many blessings for which I am truly thankful. I am no great luminary, being neither a bishop nor a canon, yet I have the honor of subscribing myself as a member of our old Class of '73."

THOMAS RUSSELL WATSON.

Has a farm in Kansas and writes: — "We still have some fine improved draft horses. The hogs are squealing an accompaniment as I write. The wheat will be immense this year and Kansas farm mortgages will take a turn in the right direction. I have the prospect of running a McCormick self-binder for a couple of weeks with five horses attached. When I think of this I wish I had taken a little less Greek and a little more practical mechanics at Harvard."

EDWARD ROBBINS WHARTON.

GEORGE ROGERS WHEELOCK.

Practising Law in Boston.

HORATIO STEVENS WHITE.

"I have just finished my third year as Dean of the Faculty. This spring I was called to the chair of Germanic languages in the new Stanford University, Palo Alto, California. The trustees here meanwhile appointed me as head of the German department with an increase in salary. The California offer however remains open, and I shall visit the Pacific coast next winter and study the situation on the spot before coming to a final decision. Our Faculty baseball nine, which has been organized for several years, continues to win a majority of its games with various student clubs. The chair of Political Economy left vacant by the resignation of Professor E. B. Andrews, who was elected President of the Brown University, has been filled by the appointment of our classmate Laughlin, who has occupied the position this year with general acceptance. As a result of his efforts the trustees have decided to appoint an associate professor in the department, to establish two special fellowships in Political Economy, and to place at his disposal a generous publication fund. The University is to be congratulated upon this able contribution which '73 has thus made to our Faculty."

HENRY WHITTEMORE.

Was married June 5, 1889, to Carolyn G. Sherman, of Watertown, N. Y.

GEORGE DUDLEY WILDES.

Continues in business in Boston.

DAVID WELD WILLIAMS.

Continues the practice of Law in Boston.

ROBERT WHEELER WILLSON.

"I have just received your notice on my return from a little trip to Canada not wholly unconnected with fishing. I am sorry that I can't enliven this year's Report with any adventures, but 'no news is good news.' I have been in Cambridge for the last three years enjoying the hospitality of the directors of the Jefferson Physical Laboratory, where I have a room in which I occupy myself with various scientific researches of no very great interest to the general public. In fact as I look back over the last three years it seems as if the little trip from which I have just returned was the most important event to chronicle; probably a month later it will have assumed its due proportion in the perspective of memory; except the fish, which I notice show a tendency to increase in size as the point of view recedes."
